Implicit mechanisms and extremist discourse: dialogizing, inferring, ideologizing

Annabelle Seoane

Abstract: From the perspective of discourse analysis, anchored in a dual enunciative and semantic approach, this study aims to examine how far-right discourses employ discursive mechanisms to infer ideological positions and construct an underlying framework of thought. It explores the implication strategies at play, while reviewing the fluid and normative uses of these strategies. The objective is to demonstrate that a disjunctive positioning – often politically incorrect or even illegal – relies on mechanisms of dialogization and inference while preserving a strong ideologizing influence.
